All Change this Quarter

This season has seen a lot of changes for the security guarding industry and for our company. From changes in legislations, campaigns launched, and a fresh website, get up to date with all the latest news, here.

SHOULD YOU BE RETHINKING WHO PROVIDES YOUR SECURITY?

Having security in place is necessary for any business or organisation with property they want to protect and people they want to feel safe. For some business's however, knowing whether or not you are getting the right deal can be more complex. Arriving late, laziness, unfriendly, untidy. All qualities you DO NOT want in a security guard, particularly if they are responsible for protecting your business.

If the guards are not properly qualified with SIA licences then they have been illegally employed and are not going to have all the right skills and training. There is also the chance that you may be overpaying for your security service. This can be due to overpricing, being given more security than you need, and if you are not satisfied with the service you are receiving it's needless to say that you should not be paying for it.

All Change

Our website has seen a lot of changes recently. Due to our aims of growth and progression, we have been updating a lot of our pages to allow for better navigation as well as for visual improvement. One of the biggest changes has been to our homepage, where you can now find our latest company video. With more changes due to be made to other parts of the site, we hope it will continue to get better and better.

Warning to Boost Security after Rise in Rural Crime in Staffordshire

A new study reveals the impact of rural crime cost Staffordshire £54 million last year as offences including violence, theft, arson and criminal damage rose. There were 9,300 incidents of rural crime in Staffordshire in 2017/18, an increase from 6,500 five years before, the Rural Crime Study shows. It shows rural businesses are more likely to suffer more serious crime than those in urban areas.

The study was put together by Staffordshire Commissioner for police, crime and fire in partnership with Staffordshire Police. The report was commissioned by Deputy Staffordshire Commissioner Sue Arnold after a national study raised concerns over the impact of crime on rural communities.

Mrs Arnold said: "Staffordshire is generally a safe place to live and work, but this study outlines the full extent of the impact crime has in our rural areas, which make up over three-quarters of the county.

"One in five people in our county lives in a rural setting and it is vital police and communities work together in order to prevent and reduce criminal activity.

"I hope this report will act as a catalyst for increased awareness of crime in our rural communities and I urge people to take steps to protect themselves and their businesses".

G.W.E SECURITY LTD PLEADS GUILTY TO PROVIDING UNLICENSED SECURITY GUARD IN GLASGOW

On Friday 31 May, G.W.E Security Ltd pleaded guilty at Paisley Sheriff Court to supplying unlicensed security guards to a construction site at Westmuir Street in Glasgow. The operations manager of G.W.E Security, David Scott also pleaded guilty.

The company was fined £1350 for providing an unlicensed security guard and David Scott was fined £450 having pleaded guilty to the same offence.

Pete Easterbrook, Criminal Investigations Manager at the SIA said: "The supply of unlicensed security operatives is a serious offence, and I welcome the conviction of GWE Security and David Scott who showed a complete disregard for not only the law but also the expectations of their customers.
